Health Science and Public Safety

Careers in Emergency Communications, Law Enforcement or Nursing are for individuals that want to make the community a safer and healthier place. Important qualities to possess include critical thinking, communication and leadership skills, an empathetic and compassionate personality, and the ability to pay attention to detail. Education requirements for entrance into these careers require graduation from an approved law enforcement academy or nursing program. Students who complete a college degree and credentials are better prepared to navigate the world of work. Investigate the specific pathways that interest you and discover the career you’ve dreamed of.
